

Fintech Product Manager

Responsibilities

- You are the customers' and the users' voice within our company
- You lead discovery efforts to deeply understand the industry and different segments of the market
- You take end-to-end ownership in tackling integration topics with external services (e-signatures, KYC,...), core-banking systems etc.
- You uncover the market's greatest pain points and turn them into scalable product solutions
- You can work independently and are comfortable taking complete ownership of end to end feature delivery
- You collaborate with engineers and designers to find the best possible solutions
- You use techniques such as prototyping, user research and data analysis to make decisions
- You identify, track and analyse key product success metrics to ensure the product is achieving company goals

Qualifications

- You have 5-7 years of working experience in product management, business analysis,... and have built products from scratch
- You have a good technical understanding of software engineering concepts, know how to build scalable software solutions and have an good understanding of how front-end and back-end applications work together in delivering value
- You have experience in product development methodologies from discovery, to delivering detailed specifications to providing support during development and product acceptance testing
- You are highly analytical, love technology and love problem-solving
- You allocate resources on the highest value opportunities and can back up your decisions with data
- You know how to communicate ideas and opinions effectively, and you can navigate and align multiple stakeholders. You feel confident in having technical conversations with engineering team members
- You get an enormous amount of energy and motivation of taking ownership and transforming your ideas into actual projects
- You know how to discover the right problems to focus on and how to validate the possible solutions
- You are fluent in English, both written and spoken, and you are able to adapt your communication style to work well with people from around the world who may not share your native language
- You have experience working in a relevant industry (financial services) and thrive in a startup environment

Hiring organization

Oper Credits

Oper gives the paper-based mortgage industry access to a digital future. Its white-labeled product allows lenders and brokers to digitize the mortgage process from contact to contract while increasing conversion and lowering the cost of a transaction.

The company today is active in DACH and Benelux supporting multiple leading mortgage providers. Using new EU regulations they enable one-click mortgages for the European market.

The company is backed by leading B2B SaaS investors.

Employment Type

Full-time

Job Location

Remote work from: Zurich, Switzerland

Date posted

November 9, 2022

Apply